Other Information We Collect

We collect information from you to provide our services. In GDPR terms, that means we have legitimate interests in collecting personal data in order to assess your risk to provide an insurance quotation, if you purchase an insurance policy then your personal data is retained for the performance of this insurance contract, we use your personal data as part of the contract in providing you our services. For advertising or tracking cookies on our website, we only place them with your explicit consent.

If we do process personal data (e.g. name, email address, IP address), we make sure such processing is in accordance with the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and any other applicable regulations.

If we need any additional personal data or wish to use the personal data we already have for a different purpose than originally intended, we will make sure that we inform you that the original use of your personal data has changed and/or re-notify you of our privacy policy and terms at the time the new data is collected.

Information we share

When you provide your consent to receive updates from GoCompare, we will share your data with GoCompare to allow them to send you marketing communications.

What communications you may receive from GoCompare

The communications GoCompare send to their customers can be categorised broadly as “direct marketing communications” and “service communications”.

a. Direct marketing communications

GoCompare understand that some of their customers like to receive only certain types of direct marketing communications. This means drawing a distinction between renewal reminders and general marketing which includes newsletters and information about their latest offers, products and promotions.

Because they draw a distinction between renewal reminders and our general marketing, you can choose to receive renewal reminders but not general marketing and vice versa. Similarly, if you tell us that you do not want to receive renewal reminders or general marketing, they will not send any direct marketing communications to you.

b. Service communications

Service communications broadly comprise of communications where:

- i. there is a legal or regulatory obligation to send to you (such as communications that are required by the regulator to be sent to you from time to time);
- ii. in connection with the provision of the services to you (such as the “best price” email, which is sent to you immediately following your use of the service in order to confirm the best price for a product or service that you have compared via our website); and
- iii. services are provided at your request (such as password reset emails, which you may ask to be sent if you do not remember your login credentials but want to access the products and services).

Storage and Security

We use and store the personal data collected for as long as reasonably necessary to provide our services, in particular to fulfil our obligations under the Insurance contract and to meet legal requirements. The particular timeline depends on the relevant service, but generally we will not retain personal data more than 6 years. Personal data that is stored is either secured through encryption and/or industry standard access controls (to make sure such access to your personal data is provided only to the people required to provide our services).

Third Parties

Some of the technologies we use for storage, analytics and marketing include third-parties such as DoubleClick. We take reasonable precautions to prevent personal data from being provided to third-parties unless the services require certain personal data such as an email address. If we do share your personal data with third-parties, we will ensure that it is lawful (e.g. through consent or based on legitimate interests) and reasonably verify that the third-party data handling processes are compliant with the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR).

Your rights to your data

We want to make it easy for you to understand your rights and empower you to use them.

Under the GDPR, you have the right to:

1. Access any personal data we have on you
2. Rectify any personal data that may be incorrect
3. Object to processing
4. Restrict processing
5. Request to Erase any of your personal data
6. Withdraw Consent (if applicable)
7. Data Portability: the right to a copy of your personal data in a machine-readable format and transfer it easily and freely from us to another company
8. If you feel like we've infringed upon your rights and you wish to lodge a formal complaint about us, please contact our Supervisory Authority at the information commissioner's office www.ico.org.uk.

Upon reviewing your personal data, if you determine that certain information is not correct please contact us. When you make requests for restriction, erasure, or rectification, we will notify you when we have made the necessary corrections or deletions.

While we will make every reasonable effort to comply with your requests, in some cases we will be unable to comply due to other, overriding concerns such as establishing or exercising legal claims, or to comply with an outstanding legal obligation.

If you have any questions or concerns about the personal data we collect, or to exercise your rights under the GDPR, please contact info@pikl.com

If you believe we have not adequately addressed your concerns and you wish to make a formal complaint, please contact our Supervisory Authority at the information commissioner's office www.ico.org.uk.

Compliance and Changes

We regularly review our compliance with our Privacy Policy and will update it following any changes in applicable privacy regulation. As a result, our Privacy Policy may change from time to time. We will not reduce your rights under this Privacy Policy without your explicit consent. We will post any privacy policy changes on this page and, if the changes are significant, we may send a notice via email or other method of contact.

Age Restriction

Our services and products are not knowingly directed at, nor do we knowingly collect any information from persons under the age of seventeen. If you are under sixteen years old, please do not use this website or its applications. If you learn that your minor child has provided us with personal data without your consent, please contact us at info@pikl.com

Key Terms

Cookies

A cookie is a small file containing a string of characters that is sent to your computer when you visit a website. When you visit the website again, the cookie allows that site to recognize your browser. Cookies may store user preferences and other information. You can reset your browser to refuse all cookies or to indicate when a cookie is being sent. However, some website features or services may not function properly without cookies. Cookies also come in different forms. Single-session cookies are erased after a visit to a website and help with navigation. Persistent (multi-session) cookies remain until they are manually deleted or expire. Cookies can also be placed by either a first party (i.e. the website you visit) or by a third party that has permission from the first party to place a cookie.

Explicit Consent

For us to get your consent under the GDPR, that consent has to be informed (it has to be plainly written so you understand what you're consenting to), freely given (as in we can't coerce you by withholding some information), and unambiguous (both sides need to be sure what each doing and agreeing to, meaning it can't be wrapped into other activities). Consent also has to be a clear affirmative action (like ticking a box or choosing particular technical settings), and you have to be able to withdraw that consent at any time.

IP address

Every device connected to the Internet is assigned a number known as an Internet protocol (IP) address. These numbers are usually assigned in geographic blocks and can either be static (i.e. your computer always has the same IP address) or dynamic (i.e. it is assigned to you by your network when you connect). An IP address can often be used to identify the location from which a device is connecting to the Internet.

Legal or Similarly Significant Effects

A processing activity has legal effects if it could impact your rights – like your freedom to associate with others, vote in an election, or take legal action – or affect your legal status or rights under a contract – like being denied housing or entry into the country. “Similarly significant effects” are ones that could affect your circumstances, behavior, or choices. This could include decisions that affect your job prospects, or even targeted advertisements that play on particular stereotypes or biases towards minority or vulnerable groups.

Non-personally identifiable information

This is information that is recorded about users so that it no longer reflects or references an individually identifiable user.

Personal data

This is information that you provide to us which personally identifies you, such as your name, email address or billing information, or other data which can be reasonably linked to such information by Inlet Insurance Services Limited

Pixel tag

A pixel tag is a type of technology placed on a website or within the body of an email for the purpose of tracking activity on websites, or when emails are opened or accessed, and is often used in combination with cookies.

Processing (of data)

“Processing” means doing anything to your data. In more legal terms, according to GDPR Article 4, this can refer to collecting, manipulating, storing, disclosing, or erasing data, among other actions.

Pseudonymization

Pseudonymization means the processing of personal data in such a manner that the personal data can no longer be attributed to a specific data subject without the use of additional information, provided that such additional information is kept separately and is subject to technical and organizational measures to ensure that the personal data are not attributed to an identified or identifiable natural person. See GDPR Article 4(5).

Special Categories of Personal Data

GDPR Article 9(1) defines special categories of personal data as data that could identify your racial or ethnic origin, political opinions, sex or sexual orientation, religious or philosophical beliefs, trade union membership, genetic information, biometric data and other health data.

Supervisory Authority

A Supervisory Authority is an independent public authority established by an EU Member State. It's in charge of handling your complaints and making sure that all businesses in its purview are acting in accordance with the GDPR. We are based in the United Kingdom, our lead Supervisory Authority is:
